Bapco has presented a financial support to the American Women's Association in support of the activities and programmes organised by the association in serving the community. Bapco's Chief Executive, Gordon Smith received the Vice President of the American Women's Association Jeanice Freeman at Bapco's Guesthouse in Awali. Commenting on the occasion, Mr. Smith said Bapco was proud of its ongoing support to the various civil institutions as part of its social responsibility towards the community.

UK calling media professionals

The British Council is inviting media personnels to showcase their work at the London Film Festival in October representing Bahrain.

Those aged between 21 and 40, specialising in television, cinema, computer programming, visual techniques and animations will have an opportunity to win the Young Creative Entrepreneur (YCE) award, a global project of the British Council.

This year candidates will travel to London to meet and join an active network of young entrepreneurs and collaborate with the others in the media field and visit different UK media sectors.

Programme support Manager

Rayyah Fathalla said: "Participating in the YCE programme is a valuable chance to represent the talent and skills of young future leaders of Bahrain in a global context."

Last year's YCE Award 2011 went to the young Bahraini Cinema Director Aysha Al Muqla.

Those interested need to be working in the media sector with at least three years experience, demonstrate their potential through their abilities and have excellent English language skills.
